REQUEST FOR RECONSIDERATION DENIED

ISSUE/MAILING DATE: 4/4/2010

Applicant is requesting reconsideration of a final refusal issued/mailed 07/10/09.

After careful consideration of the law and facts of the case, the examining attorney must deny the request for reconsideration and adhere to the final action as written since no new facts or reasons have been presented that are significant and compelling with regard to the point at issue.

The applicant's mark and the registrant's mark are closely similar due to the mutual use of the wording "GENJI." Furthermore, the use of "GENJI" for registrant's goods deserves a great deal of protection because only three marks are currently filed with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office containing the term "GENJI" for International Class 30: two marks which belong to the registrant and the applicant's mark. See attached evidence.

Furthermore, the mere addition of the term "MAI" to the applicant's mark and the term "EXPRESS" to the registrant's mark are not sufficient to overcome the likelihood of confusion because the terms are merely descriptive of the underlying goods. The marks are compared in their entireties under a Trademark Act Section 2(d) analysis. See TMEP §1207.01(b). Nevertheless, one feature of a mark may be recognized as more significant in creating a commercial impression. Greater weight is given to that dominant feature in determining whether there is a likelihood of confusion. In re Nat'l Data Corp., 753 F.2d 1056, 224 USPQ 749 (Fed. Cir. 1985); Tektronix, Inc. v. Daktronics, Inc., 534 F.2d 915, 189 USPO 693 (C.C.P.A. 1976); In re J.M. Originals Inc., 6 USPO2d 1393 (TTAB 1987); see TMEP §1207.01(b)(viii), (c)(ii). The term "MAI" translates to "rice," which is merely descriptive of the applicant's goods, which consist of rice. See Exhibits A - B. The term "EXPRESS" when applied to food goods creates the commercial impression of expediency, portability, or convenience in preparation. Moreover, because third parties use the term "EXPRESS" for its descriptive commercial impression, it is more likely consumers would view "GENJI" as the dominant feature of the registrant's mark as both the first term in the mark and due to its arbitrary nature. See Exhibits C - K; see also attached third party registrations for food goods where the term "EXPRESS" is disclaimed from the mark.

Thus, in light of the strength of the use of "GENJI" in International Class 30 and the identical nature of the applicant's goods and the registrant's goods, the Section 2(d) refusal is continued and made FINAL.

Accordingly, applicant's request for reconsideration is denied. The time for appeal runs from the date the final action was issued/mailed. 37 C.F.R. Section 2.64(b); TMEP Section 715.03(c). If applicant has already filed a timely notice of appeal, the application will be forwarded to the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board (TTAB).

Word Origin & History

express late 14c., from M.L. expressare, freq. of exprimere "represent, describe," lit. "to press out" (perhaps via an intermediary sense of something like "clay that takes form under pressure"), from ex- "out" + pressare "to press, push," from L. primere. The adj. is from L. expressus "clearly presented," pp. of exprimere, and it led to the n. (first attested 1619) meaning "special messenger." Sense of "business or system for sending money or parcels" is 1794. Related. Expressed; expresses; expressing. An express train (1841) originally ran to a certain station.

About the Brand

Annie Chun was born and raised in Seoul, Korea, and came to Northern California as a young adult, where her family owned and operated a top-rated Korean restaurant in San Annie began selling her signature Asian sauces at the Marin County Farmers' Market in the early '90s. It wasn't long before her loyal customers began to encourage her to start her own company and package the products for the retail market. So, in 1992, with $500 and a lot of help from friends and family, she founded Annie Chun's Courmet Foods. Her goal was to deliver healthy, authentic Asian foods to Western consumers, and to make Asian cooking "as easy to prepare as spaghetti" for Americans. Many of her products are based on traditional recipes that have been part of her family for generations.

In 1997 Annie moved beyond Asian sauces, introducing the first line of specialty Asian pastas produced in the United States. Her award-winning products are now distributed throughout North America and in some parts of Europe.

Annie lives with her husband and two children in Northern California.

Product Description

As a working mom, I'm always looking for ways to serve my family delicious and healthy dishes on a moment's notice. That's why I've created these Noodle Express meals. They're ready in a minute in the microwave, and you can keep them on hand at work or at home for a fast meal anytime. I love good curries, and in particular have admired the bright, flavorful curries from Singapore. In this sauce, I bring to you that same wonderful fusion of flavors that matches so well with my FreshPak Ramen noodles

A Classic Asian Curry Meal--This quick meal features my version of the traditional spicy sauce that migrated from India and spread throughout Asia. My Singapore Curry is a classic fusion of ginger, garlic, onion, tumeric and chilles.

FreshPak Noodles--A delicious change to the dry, deep-fried ramen so prevalent in American diets. My noodles are prepared in the traditional style of Asian cuisine--steamed and blanched for a firm and flavorful texture that blends beautifully with my signature sauces. Now you can send your taste buds on a three-thousand mile journey in a matter of minutes.

This meal comes to you in a biodegradable tray that decomposes in the soil with no harm to the earth. It's better for the planet and one small way we can care for our environment together.

More Information about Polenta:

Pasta had become so universally accepted as the national dish of Italy that it is hard to believe that perhaps just 2 generations ago, pasta was foreign to certain regions of Italy. In the Veneto, Frituli, and Lombardy regions, it was polenta that was the backbone of culinary culture. Preparing potenta was quite a ritual. The copper kettle, or paiolo, was kept hanging on a hook in the center of the fireplace. The hearth would often accommodate a bench on which the family sat as they watched the stream of commeal being poured in the boiling water. Then they waited for the constant suring of the cook to transform it into a meal. The commeal became potentia in 35-45 mirrutes.

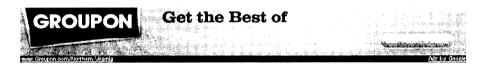

Potenta is flexible and forgiving. You must guard against lumps but it is actually difficult to ruin polenta. You will see cooking times that vary from 30 to 45 milnutes. The freshness of the polenta, the type of corn from which it is made, the coarseness of the grain, its moisture content, and how it has been stored all influence how long polenta will take to become lender. You cannot rush the process by turning up the heat. The simple way to check if it is done is to laste it. The grains should be tender with a distinct flavor of corn and it should be the proper consistency, neither too take not the Polenta is so versatile that it can be eaten as an antipasto, an entrée, or as a side dish. To serve soft and creamy polenta, the consistency should be that of a thick soup. To serve it as a side dish, you want it slightly thicker Polenta that will be cooled and cut into shapes requires a longer cooking time.

In Italy, the best polenta is made from commeal that is freshly ground within the 2-3 week harvest period. Italian long-cooking polenta has a fine, even grind, that has a better flavor and cooks to a smoother, more even consistency than American commeal or quick-cooking varieties.
